Hotel Endsleigh

Hotel Endsleigh is a Grade I historic house set in 100 acres of fairytale woodland, follies and grottos created by Humphry Repton. The Duke of Bedford, who owned a third of Devon, chose this spot for his fishing and hunting lodge.

In 2005 Olga Polizzi bought the hotel and restored it with a touch of luxury. Hidden on the edge of the Dartmoor, many of the bedrooms have magnificent views of the gardens, the river Tamar and beyond into Cornwall.

With its mix of interesting spaces, Hotel Endsleigh can be the perfect environment for just about any type of event. Private use of the whole hotel is £2,000 per night in addition to the usual accommodation charges. Endsleigh can accommodate 36 guests in 18 beautiful rooms and suites. Additional accommodation is available close by.

The cooking takes its inspiration from the surrounding countryside, and includes rabbit, venison, beef and even fish from the Tamar. In keeping with tradition, afternoon tea is the highlight of every day. Each afternoon the library table is set with an array of cakes, scones and sandwiches.

We can seat up to 80 guests in the Stable for a sit down meal or 100 across the ground floor rooms of the main house. Seasonal menus are specially created for each event, with an extensive list of wines and classic cocktails.
